Travel came back—to a certain extent—in 2021, and with it came a host of new hotel openings. And that pipeline shows no sign of slowing down, as projects that were delayed, or even initiated, during the lockdowns of 2020 are continuing to come online. Spanning from Australia's Gold Coast to the savannahs of Tanzania, this list of 45 hotly anticipated luxury openings includes a couple holdovers that were expected to launch this past year, but the majority are shiny new spots that have us excited for all the travels that 2022 will (hopefully) bring. Note that both opening dates and starting rates are subject to change.

Oslo, Norway

Expected opening: Sept 2022

Rates from $289 per night

This 231-room hotel sits in Frogner, one of Oslo's oldest neighborhoods, and is housed in an art deco 1930s building that was once the HQ of the city's electrical company. The major draw for this property is that Norway's small but charming capital has long lacked anywhere luxe to stay bookending any trip to the fjords—a problem solved when this opens in the fall. "It's catching up with its Scandinavian sister capitals," says Mollie Fitzgerald of Frontier Travel, who loves Norway year-round, "In the summertime, you've got 24 hours of daylight, and in the wintertime, awesome winter sports." Hopefully, this fall, the weather will still be good enough to eke out some time at the rooftop pool and bar, a first for Oslo.
