COCKTAILS & DRINKS
THE PROHIBITIONISTS

After the National Prohibition Act of 1919, the United States federal law enforced numerous agents to investigate the illegal production, sale and transportation of alcohol. Notable names include The Untouchables – the group tasked with capturing the infamous gangster Al Capone, his older brother "Two-Gun" Hart, undercover duo Izzy & Moe, and suffragette Georgia Hopley.

ENTER THE EXOTICS

During the 1930s, something great happened. Pineapples and passionfruit – both exotic and inaccessible – became wildly cultivated and marketed. Native to Latin America, the passionfruit, with its beautiful showy flowers, was distributed to most continents in the early 1900s so that by the 1930s, most countries had a thriving passionfruit industry. At the same time, Dole Food Company was starting and, today, produces more than 75% of the world's pineapples.

THE CLASSICS

We would love to share the historical origins of these timeless cocktails, but as most drinks start out as a mixologist's experiment or a guest's special order, the actual account of the event is often ambiguous. Therefore, we must limit ourselves to say that – maybe – the Sidecar originates from Paris, the Gimlet from Great Britain, and the Negroni from Italy. However, we do know for sure that the Old Cuban was brought to life by Audrey Saunders in New York in 2001, and that all of the aforementioned drinks have become famous classics, enjoyed by millions across the world.

JELL-O

While some of us might not know about the ‘watch it wiggle, see it jiggle’ TV jingle, chances are we have all eaten Jell-O at some point. From simple dessert squares to savoury salads, Jello-O can be moulded into anything, and, in the 1930s, at a time of poverty and hopelessness, this was just the slice of sophistication that people needed.

GINGER JAKE

The story of Jamaican Ginger takes place during the time of alcohol prohibition in America in the late 20s. At that time the distillation of illegal alcohol became a multi million dollar business. The brew with the street name ‘Ginger Jake’ was primarily made from Jamaican ginger root extract and a lot of alcohol, and it was not only in very high demand across the USA but it was also a slow poison causing neurological damage. Many songs were written at the time for the thousands of people who suffered the ‘Jake leg’ after consumption.

SECTION 7

During Prohibition (1920-1933), the U.S. Treasury Department authorised physicians to write prescriptions for medicinal alcohol. Licensed doctors, with pads of government-issued prescription forms prescribed their patients to take regular doses of hooch to treat a number of ailments. It was the only way to obtain alcohol legally these years, and it was mostly whiskey, cognac or brandy.

PLUTO

When Pluto was discovered in 1930 it was declared the 9th planet of our solar system. However later its status as a planet was questioned, leading to the International Astronomical Union to reclassify Pluto as a dwarf planet due to its size. The composition of this dwarf planet is primarily ice and rock and it has five known moons. Pluto has yet to complete a full orbit of the Sun since its discovery, as one Plutonian year is 247.68 years long.

THE BARTEENDER

For Loukia Blouti, creating Sommerso’s drinks menu has been a true labour of love, the culmination of an unusual career that began, remarkably, during her undergraduate years when she was studying to be a civil engineer and added a part-time gig bartending to support her studies. Having spent half her life in bars both as a client and as a professional bartender, she says, “the thing that brings me most joy is how any bar can be a sacred getaway from everyday life. Where you bond with friends and colleagues, where love blooms on first dates. These are moments that everybody needs in their lives.”

THE ARTIST

Tim Robinson, represented by Artistique International, is an Editorial Illustrator and Graphic Designer from Croton on Hudson, New York. After growing up in an artistic environment, he worked for Milton Glaser and was in awe of the varied and eye-opening work. When he works it is to please his eye and solve the problem in the illustration assignment, when the two happen together he believes this produces the best work. Tim began with drawings but evolved towards collage, the work is about concept and design, color and balance. He enjoys it when an assignment lends itself to a hint of humor, along with using all manner of visual imagery to produce a final piece that is both thought provoking and visually rewarding.
